BACKGROUND:

The goal of the Family Resource Centers (FRCs) is to develop healthy families who live in healthy communities. FRCs function as a hub of community services designed to improve family life, particularly for overburdened or disadvantaged families and children. FRCs engage families in their own problem-solving process which results in psychological, social, and economic self-sufficiency. They utilize community building strategies which involve principles of family support, resident involvement, development of public/private partnerships, and shared accountability.
