"Looking Over The Fiscal Cliff "

Just what is the fiscal cliff and why do we care? It is a two-part problem; on the federal level, an increase in many existing taxes and a host of new ones, followed by a giant cut in federal spending. We care because our nation and many states are drowning in debt and our economy is far from robust. Recent CBO estimates suggest that the economy could go back into recession next year if we slide off the fiscal cliff without compromise from both sides of the aisle. Furthermore, Moody's has threatened to cut the U.S. government's credit rating if no agreement is struck by the end of the year.

The effects will be widespread with income tax cuts enacted in the early 2000's under President Bush are scheduled to expire on December 31. This will increase the top tax rate to 39.6% from 35%. The estate tax would return to a $1 million exemption and a 55% rate, from a $5.12 million exemption and a 35% rate. There are also a host of new taxes related to Obama Care scheduled to take effect including a 3.8% tax on investment income such as capital gains and dividends, on high-income taxpayers. Additionally, there is talk that the long-treasured mortgage interest deduction may face changes as well as the elimination of the 2% reduction in the payroll tax and a provision that prevents millions of households from facing AMT. Most of these tax increases will affect small businesses that are the main driver of most private sector jobs in this nation.

To exacerbate the tax increases, there are $1.2 trillion in automatic spending cuts that take effect in 2013. The cuts, known as sequestration, were designed to force Congress to act. They stem from the deal that President Obama and Congressional Republicans cut in 2011 to increase the debt-ceiling limit. Over half of the automatic cuts will be to the military that will have trickle down effects to military contractors, as they will lay off workers to contend with cuts to military programs. Further cuts will be made to many other federal government entitlement programs, unemployment and other federal services, all of which could have devastating consequences to our fragile economy.

Now that one of the most contentious presidential elections in modern history is now over with the re-election of President Obama, maybe those bickering in Washington D.C. can get back to the business of governing and leading this great nation of ours and avoid going over the cliff as the financial damage to us citizens could be severe. We will continue to monitor this and other events closely and invest accordingly.
