FORM 11: Agricultural Education Funding

DATE: March 11, 2014

PAGE: 2 of 2

BACKGROUND:

Summary

The budget proposal released by Gov. Jerry Brown last month provides billions more for California schools over the course of the 2014-15 fiscal year, but contains proposals that would eliminate the Agricultural Education Incentive Grant, which supports agricultural education in the state's schools. The Agricultural Education Incentive Grant currently supports local agricultural education programs and FFA activities in more than 300 high schools statewide, with more than 74,000 students – up from 21,000 in the mid-1980s – enrolled in those programs.

Riverside County has a robust agriculture industry and enjoys a very successful relationship with FFA programs throughout the county. Failure to fully fund the Agricultural Education Incentive Grant will significantly impair educational and recreational opportunities for more than a thousand students participating in FFA programs throughout the county.

It is important for the board to show its support for the youth of the county involved in agricultural education programs, and the agricultural industry as a whole, by supporting full funding of the Agricultural Education Incentive Grant.

Impact on Citizens and Businesses

Elimination of the Agricultural Education Incentive Grant will adversely affect more than a thousand high school students currently participating in FFA and other agricultural education programs.
