BACKGROUND:

Summary (continued)

The shooting target systems at the Ben Clark Training Center (BCTC) have reached the end of their life cycle (10 years) and are failing from normal wear and tear. The current systems used only allow for a static line and 90 degree facing movement, and does not provide the ability to shoot a moving target or provide decision based training, such as shoot, don't shoot. Currently, decision based trainings are an essential part of law enforcement training. The Sheriff's Department continually updates use of force training, to include firearms training, giving officers the best options to consider. Ultimately, the officer and the communities they serve benefit from sound decisions derived from training, considering that tactical decisions are often made quickly and under stressful conditions. By upgrading the system to have a moving target option and a decision based training scenario with the targets facing up to 180 degrees, the shooting bays will give officers enhanced firearms training in a compressed and physically challenging time frame using realistic scenarios.

The BCTC Range provides firearm training for Sworn Basic Academy Recruits, Sworn Peace Officers throughout Southern California, as well as tri-annual qualifications for Riverside Sheriff Department Sworn officers. In support of public and peace officer safety, firearms training is included in the mandated 24 hours of perishable skills training by California Peace Officers Standards and Training. When not being used for Department firearms qualification, or department specific training, BCTC offers range usage to allied agencies for public safety training at Board approved rates generating between $60,000 to $100,000 annually.

Contract History and Price Reasonableness

In December 2014, County Purchasing issued Public Works Bid# SHARC # 267, which was advertised on the County's purchasing website at www.purchasing.co.riverside.ca.us. The bid required a mandatory job walk. Notifications were sent to eleven (11) companies; four (4) vendors attended the job walk, and only one (1) vendor responded to the bid with a quote. As a result of the bidding process, Advanced Training System (ATS) was the most responsive and responsible bidder.

The Public Works portion of the bid, consisting of electrical work, was later removed and performed by Riverside County's Facilities Management. The final bid was awarded to the sole responsive and responsible bidder for the purchase of equipment and payment of services conducted for the initial installation phase for the shooting range target systems at Ben Clark Training Center and Lake Cahuilla. The total cost for equipment was $203,563 including tax. The total cost for labor and installation was $71,500.

During the initial project stage, the Department looked into applying for a grant as a source of revenue for the second phase of the project, but this plan did not materialize. For the purpose of system continuity, the Sheriff would like to utilize ATS to complete the second and final phase of the range upgrade for Bays 1, 2 and 3. Due to the vendor's prescheduled projects and commitments, they are only available during the period of April 6th through the 17th to do the installation; otherwise the Department will have to wait until 2017 to schedule the installation. In addition, the vendor is honoring their pricing from the initial bid, and the Department would like to take advantage of the fixed pricing since the pricing is not guaranteed if the project is delayed.

The cost to complete the remaining three shooting bays is broken down as follows:

- Equipment and related materials: $81,420
- Labor/Installation: $34,260
- Travel: $4,200
- Tax: $6,514

Impact on Residents and Businesses

The upgraded shooting target system is vital to the Ben Clark Training Center as it provides and tests an officer's reaction time and movement skills. Law Enforcement relies on this type of interactive training within simulated, yet realistic, scenarios to keep its officers trained to assess their environment, judge and act quickly, making the right decisions under the most trying of circumstances, and keeping all involved individuals in mind when they are placed in violent situations.
