Re: ADA Parking Compliance

Date: March 27, 2012

Honorable Supervisors and County Administrators:

I submit that it is dishonorable, if not illegal, to charge qualified disabled citizens and veterans parking fees to attend public meetings. I request the County immediately reverse the policy that charges for use of the designated parking stalls in the County Administration parking structure.

For your consideration, I offer the following reference material from state government resources that I hope you find informative.

Additionally, I request the reimplement of policy validating parking for all good citizens attending and participating in public meetings of our government.

Respectfully,

Paul Jacobs

Parking Privileges

California law provides special parking privileges to individuals with disabilities who drive. In order to take advantage of most of these privileges, the vehicle of a person with a disability must display either a distinguishing license plate or distinguishing placard, both of which can be obtained on a permanent or temporary basis from the DMV. (Cal. Veh. Code, § 22511.55 et seq.)

Parking spaces identified with blue curb paint are exclusively for the use of people with disabilities. (Cal. Veh. Code, § 21458 (a)(5).)

Local authorities generally decide where special parking spaces will be located. In addition to designating reserved parking spaces on streets and in public lots, local authorities may require
