BACKGROUND:

The Healthy Riverside County Initiative (HRCI) established public health priorities to drive health promotion, policy and environmental change strategies and evidence-based practices to improve health, reduce and prevent chronic disease, and promote livable communities. The four HRCI priorities are to (1) improve healthy nutrition, (2) increase physical activity, (3) reduce tobacco exposure and (4) support healthy and safe environments.

Diabetes Free Riverside (DeFer) focuses on the first two priorities--healthy nutrition and physical activity--as a means for reducing obesity and preventing diabetes in the City of Perris. The project includes conducting school and community health assessments of children and adults, population screenings, and the development of pilot projects for the prevention of obesity, diabetes, asthma and other chronic diseases in children, teens, adults and older adults using evidence-based and research supported interventions and in conjunction with current community initiatives such as Live Well Perris.

Key partners will include Claremont Graduate University School of Community and Global Health, Inland Empire Health Plan, UC Riverside School of Medicine, City of Perris and the County of Riverside in partnership with the community.
